

Falcon's Treehouse Takes Guests on a Whirlwind Tour of Information Technology with iSpace

Orlando, Florida- _____, 2006 – Creative design firm Falcon's Treehouse, LLC returns to its roots with the Singapore Science Center's new multimillion dollar exhibit, iSpace. Intended to promote the exciting field of Information Communication Technology to the next generation of young scientists and consumers, the exhibit features a historical overview of the ubiquitous field in addition to cutting-edge and futuristic applications of the technology.

A collection of more than fifty hands-on exhibits showcased in a sleek, streamlined environment, the centerpiece of iSpace is a stunning aluminum tree sculpture. Comprised of 111 miles of fiber optic cable, the tree is set within a glass globe of the earth to metaphorically reinforce the message that an interconnected network of communication branches touches each corner of our world. Other innovative features include an interactive game show led by a wacky digital Host, a futuristic "Transporter" attraction and an Apprentice-style Infocomm Technology "job interview".

"We believe that the most effective way to showcase the latest ideas and technologies in the Infocomm Industry is to bring them to life through fun hands-on exhibits and engaging, innovative interactives," says Cecil Magpuri, the President and creative director of Falcon's Treehouse. "I've always had a place in my heart for edutainment - the buzzword coined to describe content-driven, museum-like attractions that have been designed to entertain while also providing the facts."

Magpuri's company, Falcon's Treehouse, got its start with a pair of high-profile edutainment experiences for Disney's EPCOT and its AT&T sponsored exhibits, Webopolis and New Global Neighborhood. Now, in association with the Singapore Science Center, Falcon's Treehouse has been given the opportunity to create a number of innovative exhibits to support the theme of Infocomm technology.

The Falcon's Treehouse mission is to enrich lives worldwide through unmatched storytelling, creating and collaborating on unique destinations, attractions, events and entertainment. With iSpace, an ambitious project being executed in conjunction with the government of Singapore, the aim is to help steer the country's economy by exposing children and young adults to an important industry that is omnipresent, yet often taken for granted in most of our lives.

"There are very few things that are as all-encompassing or as important as information communication," says Magpuri. "From computers to cell phones, even face to face conversation, information communication is all about conveying ideas clearly, effectively, efficiently, and in our case, with a layer of entertainment." The team at Falcon's Treehouse believes that it's that layer of entertainment that will keep the information fresh and relevant in people's minds.

Harnessing innovations in exhibitry and guest interaction, iSpace will also effectively demonstrate the indelible influence science fiction has had on science and popular culture. Using science fiction as a conduit, this revolutionary design will visitors' technological knowledge while serving as the ideal proving ground for the future technologies of industry partners.

In addition to experimenting with the frontiers of modern technology, Falcon's Treehouse is also currently under contract as the master planners for the Hong Kong's Eco Park, San Diego's Wild Animal Park and Destiny USA. Falcon's Treehouse is also developing attractions and experiences for Lotte World and India's Ramoji Film City.
